The Newsletter of the International Machaut Society

Number 15
Spring 2008

PRESIDENT'S COLUMN (Deborah McGrady <dlm4z@cms.mail.virginia.edu>)

Greetings Machaut enthusiasts! I am honored and delighted to serve as the new president of the International Machaut Society, and in my capacity as president, it is a great pleasure to introduce the long-awaited Machaut Newsletter! Many have been involved in bringing this edition to fruition, especially Jennifer Bain who has fulfilled spectacularly her responsibilities as Vice President in her first year on the job by delivering this newsletter to the Machaut community. Thank you, Jennifer!

In this my first year as president, I am most grateful for the work done by the previous two presidents, Alice Clark and Elizabeth Upton, who in the past years have done so much to keep Machaut studies vibrantly alive. They leave big shoes to step into, but I'll do my very best!

I would also like to thank Lawrence Earp for his key contribution to this newsletter. Lawrence Earp provides herein an update on Machaut scholarship with an extensive bibliography and discography of works from 2002 to 2007. With 169 publications in the fields of literature, music and art history, not to mention 17 recent dissertations that treat Machaut and 23 new recordings of his music, the full extent to which Machaut studies are thriving is obvious. In addition to this important update on Machaut scholarship, Domenic Leo has kindly provided an art overview of Machaut, a resource that expands on his dissertation bibliography, a guide that will certainly prove useful in the study of Machaut imagery.

Further testimony to the vitality of Machaut studies is witnessed in the upcoming presence of the International Machaut Society at international conferences. As tradition dictates, three sessions are organized for the May 2008 International Congress on Medieval Studies at Western Michigan University and after a brief hiatus, the Society will be return to the Leeds conference in July with two full sessions dedicated to current research in the field.

Looking forward, I hope that the Society will engage more actively in the promotion of teaching Machaut in a wide variety of undergraduate courses so as to further enhance the visibility and importance of the first recognized French “poète” to late medieval studies. This very issue will be the subject of a roundtable at Kalamazoo this year, where we intend to discuss materials, approaches, and contexts suitable for the teaching of Machaut.

ANNOUNCEMENTS (Lawrence Earp <lmearp@wisc.edu>)

A new (lost) Machaut manuscript! Dr. James Willoughby (Faculty of History, University of Oxford) has identified an interesting Machaut item (a “frensh boke of temps pastour”) in an entry in a booklist from the medieval almshouse of Ewelme in Oxfordshire, in Oxford, Bodleian Library, MS d. d. Ewelme a. 7, A. 47. (3). It would appear to be another attestation of Machaut’s Jugement dou Roy de Behaingne (labeled Le Temps Pascour in Machaut MS Vg and in several medieval library inventories). The manuscript also contained “diuers stories” in French, and thus may have been a full-fledged Machaut text manuscript. The entry appears in an inventory of goods dated 10 September 1466, and relates to the library of Alice Chaucer, granddaughter to the poet, and at this time dowager duchess of Suffolk. Geoffrey Chaucer, of course, owed a literary debt to Machaut’s Behaingne, particularly in his Book of the Duchess. The booklist will be included in Willoughby’s forthcoming volume for the Corpus of British Medieval Library Catalogues, “Hospitals, Towns, and the Professions” (London: British Library).

Through the Bibliothèque Nationale website <<http://www.bnf.fr>>, check out “Mandragore” <<http://mandragore.bnf.fr/html/accueil.html>>, an online digital archive of manuscript images. It currently includes over 140,000 notices of works at the Bibliothèque Nationale and Bibliothèque de l’Arsenal, over 50,000 of them accompanied by digitized images, sometimes details, sometimes full pages. MS fr. 1584 (Machaut A) is there, as is MS fr. 146 (Roman de Fauvel), and many others of interest.

SARAH JANE WILLIAMS AWARD

The Society offers the Sarah Jane Williams Award, a $500 prize in memory of the founder of the society. The award, given every other year, is designed to promote the study, criticism, performance, research, and exchange of ideas related to all aspects of the works of Guillaume de Machaut. Fields of inquiry include (but are not limited to) literary history and criticism, musicology, the performing arts, art history, and codicology. Projects centered on the study and performance of the works of other poets and composers or on other performance or manuscript traditions will also be considered, insofar as they contribute significantly to the study of the background, context, or influence of the works of Machaut. Graduate students in particular are encouraged to apply. Past winners include Jennifer Bain (1999), Lawrence Earp (2000), and Elizabeth Eva Leach (2002). Applications in triplicate, including a one-page description of the proposed project, a curriculum vitae, and the name and contact information of one recommender, should be sent no later than March 1 of each odd-numbered year to the Secretary-Treasurer of the International Machaut Society. The winner will be announced at the annual Business Meeting of the Society, held at the International Congress on Medieval Studies at Kalamazoo in May, and in the Society’s Newsletter, Ymaginer. Submissions for the next round are due on March 1, 2009.

WEBMASTER’S REPORT (Alice V. Clark <avclark@loyno.edu>)

web site: <http://www.loyno.edu/~avclark/Machaut/imshome.htm>

The International Machaut Society website, developed so masterfully by Cynthia Cyrus, continues to provide a service to members and other people around the globe. One sign of our connectedness is that we are the fifth entry on a Google search on “Machaut,” and on Yahoo we’re number three, behind only Wikipedia! I receive questions by e-mail fairly regularly (most recently one from Brazil and one each apparently from France and England), which I try to answer as quickly as I can. To forestall some of those (such as how one can find editions of music and/or text), I’ve beefed up some of the prefatory information on the home page, and I’m hoping someday to create a “Machaut FAQ” section—unless someone else would like to volunteer to do so. I try to make updates as I receive material, whether that be address changes or other things; what session information and abstracts I’ve received through the 2008 meeting are available. The links page doesn’t get updated regularly, but I’d love to hear from you about new pages to add, or dead links to remove. Send those, or any other relevant information, to the webmaster at <avclark@loyno.edu>.

AWARDS, GRANTS, FORTHCOMING PUBLICATIONS AND DISSERTATIONS IN PROGRESS (Jennifer Bain <bainj@dal.ca>)

Barton Palmer writes: Middle English Text Series (METS), in conjunction with TEAMS (Medieval Institute), has agreed to publish THE COMPLETE POETIC AND MUSICAL WORKS OF GUILLAUME DE MACHAUT: A DUAL LANGUAGE EDITION in five volumes (poetry) and one-three volumes (music). Yolanda Plumley and I will cooperate on the project. The edition will be based on BN 1584, and we are looking into ways of incorporating the ms illuminations in the text (suggestions welcome). The edition will include my previously published Garland volumes, including the VOIR DIT edited by Dan Leech-Wilkinson, with new editions/translations of the REMEDE, the LYON, the ALERION, the four minor dits, the lyrics, and the motets. We'd like to hear from Machaudistes regarding the presentation of the text, whether to do it in the minimum modernization style used in the VD and the PRISE or in the standard method of doing OF/MF texts. We would also welcome any suggestions, large or small, regarding material to be included in the front matter--and improvements/corrections in the already published translations. Yolanda and I hope to have this project completed in 6-8 years at the most. METS will bring out each volume individually as it is done. Printing will be done in quality paperback, with pricing to suit classroom use.

Elizabeth Eva Leach won the Society for Music Theory's 2007 Outstanding Publication Award for a distinguished article by an author of any age or career stage, for her article, "Gendering the Semitone, Sexing the Leading Tone: Fourteenth-Century Music Theory and the Directed Progression." She is currently on leave this year after receiving a grant to write a Machaut monograph, Guillaume de Machaut: Scribe, Poet, Composer, funded by the Arts and Humanities Research Council and Royal Holloway, University of London.

Anna Zayaruznaya received the Hollace Anne Schafer Memorial Award for the best paper read by a graduate student at a meeting of the New England chapter of the AMS for: "Lies, Damned Lies, and Hockets: Words and Music in Machaut's Motet 14," Amherst, MA, September 2004. A Ph.D. candidate at Harvard, she is writing a dissertation, tentatively titled "Form and Idea in the Fourteenth-century Motet," which will address issues of text-music relations in 14th-century motets.

Nancy Freeman Regalado is publishing an article on the songs of Jehannot de Lescurel, who is one of Machaut's most immediate and least studied predecessors: "The Songs of Jehannot de Lescurel in Paris, BnF MS Fr. 146 : Love Lyrics, Moral Wisdom, and the Material Book," in Poetry, Knowledge and Community in Late Medieval France, ed. Rebecca Dixon and Finn E. Sinclair, with the participation of Adrian Armstrong, Sylvia Huot, and Sarah Kay (Woodbridge: Boydell and Brewer, forthcoming 2008).

Jennifer Bain is publishing an article on large-scale pitch organization in Machaut's music: "'Messy Structure?' Multiple Tonal Centers in the Music of Machaut," Music Theory Spectrum, forthcoming 2008.

Deborah McGrady has written the entry for "Guillaume de Machaut," in the Cambridge Companion to Medieval French Literature, eds. Sarah Kay and Simon Gaunt (Cambridge University Press, forthcoming).

Kate Maxwell, a Ph.D. candidate at the University of Glasgow, is writing a dissertation, "Guillaume de Machaut and the mise en page of Medieval French Sung Verse," which addresses the visual impact of the music in the six principal "complete-works" Machaut manuscripts.

Delogu, Daisy Jeanne. "Royal Biography and the Politics of the Hundred Years War: Theorizing the Ideal Sovereign." Diss. University of Pennsylvania, 2003. Ann Arbor: UMI, AAT 3087391. Abstract (edited): The dissertation examines royal biographies composed during the Hundred Years War—those of Hugh Capet (anonymous, c. 1358), Pierre I of Cyprus (Guillaume de Machaut, 1369–77), Edward, the Black Prince (Herald Chandos, c. 1385), and Charles V (Christine de Pizan, 1405)—and how these texts reflect and inform the larger body of political literature composed during this period. The Prise d'Alexandrie posits Pierre I as an ideal crusader-king, yet the notion that Pierre I adequately represents an ideal crusader and the value of crusade as an objective are systematically undermined.

Findley, Brooke Heidenreich. "Discourses of Sincerity: Gender, Authority and Signification in Some Medieval French Courtly Texts." Diss. Duke University, 2003. Ann Arbor: UMI, AAT 3135128. Abstract (edited): This dissertation examines sincerity claims as they are employed by male and female author figures in selected French courtly texts dating from between 1100 and 1366. Part one considers two sets of texts: the Latin letters of Abelard and Heloise (early twelfth century) and selected Occitan poems of the troubadours and trobairitz (late twelfth to early thirteenth centuries). It demonstrates that both Heloise and the trobairitz use sincerity claims to construct implied authorial personae who are imagined to exist "outside" of the texts in which they speak. Part two moves to a reading of two Old French narrative works, the Roman de la Poire (mid thirteenth century) and Guillaume de Machaut's Voir Dit (circa 1366). I contend that the female figures in these works use sincerity claims that are very similar to those analyzed in part one, but with a different effect. Instead of constructing implied author figures, their sincerity claims serve to question the efficacy of verbal language, and ultimately to paradoxically de-construct the poetic language of the texts from which they speak.

Hartt, Jared Christopher. "Sonority, Syntax, and Line in the Three-Voice Motets of Guillaume de Machaut." Diss. Washington University in St. Louis, 2007. Ann Arbor: UMI, AAT 3268033. Abstract: This study delves into the inner workings of Guillaume de Machaut's musical language. Given the composer's prolific output, I restrict my study to his three-voice motets, a body of works that provides a large enough source group from which to theorize about sonority and draw some general conclusions. And while the available fourteenth-century treatises tell us little about the three-voice sonorities, I seek to root my ideas in contemporaneous thought. I begin by examining the morphology of sonority. I develop a new schema for two- and three-voice sonorities that articulates aural differences and draws distinctions among all of the possible intervallic configurations more clearly and more precisely than any system of classification proposed by modern scholars. I then examine the syntax of sonority. I propose a more detailed definition of the directed progression, one that includes a wide range of voice-leading possibilities and also takes into account every type of sonority. I discuss the various functions that progressions may assume, propose a list of criteria for judging cadential strength in the motets, and explore the function of tonal centering.

In a chapter devoted to the liturgical tenor, I outline the melodic and tonal characteristics of Machaut's chosen tenors and elucidate the various ways he organizes his tenors, identifying compositional procedures that accord with the rationales of two fourteenth-century theorists' instruction on motet composition. I discuss how isorhythmic structure affects the tenor's potential for tonal articulation.

I then apply the material of my first three chapters—the study's theoretical core—to analyses of four motets. For Motet 4, I provide a detailed account of syntax, describing prolongations and cadences of various strengths. Because the tenors and entire polyphonic textures of the three secular motets differ significantly from the liturgical motets, and since little has been written about these distinctive works, I conclude with detailed analyses of Motets 11, 16 and 20. A comparison of the secular and liturgical motets provides further insight into Machaut's compositional style and procedure.

Hills, Alexander Bevis. "Fearful Symmetry. A work for Orchestra." D.M.A. diss. Stanford University, 2004. Ann Arbor: UMI, AAT 3128510. Abstract (edited): This thesis is a large-scale, single movement work for orchestra. My intention was to explore as many, often contradictory seeming, approaches to musical time, proportion and form as possible within the same continuous frame. ... The more fragmentary sections are more regular, and based around iso-periodic proportions, much as one might find in Machaut or De Vitry, and indeed the initial B section is a parody isorhythmic motet, even to the extent of using modal pitch materials.

Kievman, Carson. "Ockeghem and Ligeti: The Music of Transcendence." Diss. Princeton University, 2003.

Ann Arbor: UMI, AAT 3080852. Abstract (edited): If we suspend disbelief for a moment and imagine that five centuries of musical development never existed, we find that music from the 14th and 15th century connects unequivocally to the most radical and forward thinking musical creations of the late 20th century, as exemplified by a comparison of the music of Ligeti and Ockeghem. These composers, who lived five centuries apart, have in common the creation of music built upon a sophisticated, albeit largely imperceptible, framework upon which they constructed undifferentiated progressions of massive counterpoint. Notably, both composers avoid traditional means of closure via cadence and the sublimation of linear sequencing. The result of their efforts stands in stark contrast to the classical musical ideals that have dominated musical culture from the 16th to the 20th century. Early music, and Ockeghem in particular, may have directly or indirectly influenced new music and the development of Ligeti's style. By analyzing musical techniques that have become synonymous with Ligeti, and his references to early music composers such as Ockeghem and De Machaut as well as some 20th century masters, an attempt is made to determine the extent to which Ligeti earned his stature by creating an entirely new musical form, or how he may have used existing ideas to develop a hybrid.

Maurey, Joseph. "Music and ceremony in Saint-Martin of Tours, 1205—1500." Diss. University of Chicago, 2005. Ann Arbor: UMI, AAT 3195038. Abstract: The dissertation focuses on one of the most important pilgrimage sites in medieval Europe, the collegiate church dedicated to a patron saint of France. The periods bounding my dissertation are 1205, when the first in five liturgical reforms took place in Saint-Martin, a church benefiting from an unwavering royal patronage, and the end of the fifteenth century, which saw the apogee of Tours as the political capital of France. Contrary to musicological studies of other ecclesiastical establishments, typically focusing on institutions at the zenith of their intellectual influence, I chronicle a church clinging to its glorious past through music and liturgy. Although most of the manuscripts and printed sources forming the core of my dissertation have occasionally received scholarly attention, there has been no musicological interest in them as a group per se: in their historical development spanning some five centuries, in contrasting the liturgies of the city's two main churches.

The study offers the first comprehensive account of liturgy in Saint-Martin of Tours, bringing to light not only the music chanted on various celebrations, but also the idiosyncratic ways in which feasts unfolded. Matins on St Martin's principal feast (Nov. 11), for instance, was celebrated three consecutive times. More than the execution of any other office, the feast echoed the tradition of perpetual psalmody instituted in the church in the sixth century, and was dotted with unique liturgical practices and singing manners. Furthermore, I study the different spiritual and political motivations that stood behind the composition of chants uniquely found in the service books of Saint-Martin, notably a body of Latin liturgical songs (prosa) dedicated to two major celebrations, Martin's Nov. 11 feast, and Corpus Christi. Similar to my approach to other aspects of my project, I achieve this by juxtaposing a wide variety of sources, including notated service books, archival sources that shed light on performing forces and the endowments that made them possible, as well as pertinent medieval charts and histories. I conclude by examining how the changing stature of St Martin in the late Middle Ages inspired composers of polyphony, notably Guillaume de Machaut.

Miller, Anne-Hélène. "Le Poète dans la cité: Figures de l'intellectuel vernaculaire au tournant de la fin du Moyen Age." Diss. Washington: University of Washington, 2007. Ann Arbor: UMI, AAT 3289770. Abstract. This dissertation examines the poetics of the social representation of vernacular intellectuals as poets at the turn of the Later Middle Ages, establishing new links between texts by Brunetto Latini, Dante Alighieri, Guillaume de Machaut, the anonymous author of the Songe du Vergier, and Philippe de Mézières.

I show that, while often presenting themselves as "translators" of received knowledge, with the rediscovery of Aristotle and, in particular Cicero, in thirteenth-century urban schools and universities, the author-narrators of these apparently disparate texts raise similar ontological and epistemological questions regarding their poetic figures. Reenacting the conviction that true nobility consisted of deed rather than lineage, these intellectuals redefine their civic roles and status as poets in a period of social mutability, using the rhetoric of the higher standard of “nobility,” classical “utility” and “true” user of language.

In an ever changing fourteenth-century French society whose model is in part the Italian “city-state,” the French writers defend their contingency to act poetically. Aiming at constituting for themselves a place in the city, they also allow the images of the sort of poets, intellectual-philosopher, once acceptable in the Platonic Republic to resurface. In the process of defending the human contribution to the meaning of the text, these writers develop original voices that prefigure the early modern author. Building on theories of “écriture,” the “author-function,” and “authorship” by scholars such as Michel Foucault and Alistair Minnis, I demonstrate that a new material awareness of the writer’s presence in the text both distinguishes vernacular men of letters from mere clerks, and allows them to aspire to the superior status of classical poets in public life. By the end of this period, the court of the increasingly centralized French State has become poetically sole guarantor of poetic ambition in French.

In this way, the project sheds new light on the institutionalization of culture, usually considered characteristic of early modern and contemporary France, as well as on the channels of communication between French and Italian texts, regarding pre-humanistic figures of poets and concepts of the city towards the end of the Middle Ages.

Singer, Julie. “Lines of Sight: Love Lyric, Science, and Authority in Late Medieval and Early Modern French and Italian Culture.” Diss. Duke University, 2006. Ann Arbor: UMI, AAT 3267931. Abstract. In the later Middle Ages, poets and medical writers often treated shared subject matter, as both sought to describe the human body and its relationships with the outside world. Conventional wisdom holds that medical writings of the period are possessed of a sort of absolute cultural authority, while poetic texts that engage with concepts typically claimed by the scientific domains are ciphers to be “decoded” through the lens of these scientific treatises. However, a closer look at the interplay between specific poetic texts and the medical texts with which they share their language and their ideas reveals a far more dialogic system of references and debates. Lines of Sight focuses specifically on the image of the eye in the French and Italian textual tradition in order to problematize the accepted model of scientific authority. The eyes—and the ambiguous space between not seeing, seeing, and even seeing too much—provide a laboratory in which to test poetic writers’ acceptance of medical models of “wholeness” and “remedy.” Seeing is crucial to knowledge and to the model of love, prevalent in medical, poetic, and philosophical texts, that I have termed the love-imprint. According to this model love was held to be a physiologically-based phenomenon arising from the contemplation of the beloved, whose image passes through the eyes and brain before becoming imprinted in the lover’s heart. But if love is a bodily process that begins in the eyes, then how does blindness affect the form and content of love poetry? Through close readings of literary and medical texts, I argue that late medieval and early modern authors complicate a unidirectional model of authority by constructing alternate literary remedies to blindness. Guido Cavalcanti’s appropriation of “scientific” language in Donna me prega, Petrarch’s attacks on physicians in the Invective and the rhetorical remedies he proposes in De remediis utriusque fortunae, and Guillaume de Machaut’s poetic prosthesis in the Livre du Voir Dit may all be construed as proposing thematic and formal remedies designed to rival or replace the dominant medical understanding of the eye and its (dys)functions.

Vander Elst, Stefan Erik Kristiaan. “Chaucer and the Crusades: A Study in Late Medieval Literary and Political Thought.” Diss. Princeton University, 2006. Ann Arbor: UMI, AAT 3214595. Abstract. This dissertation offers a new solution to an old problem in the Canterbury Tales. It breaks with the accepted interpretation of the Knight and Squire characters, which have traditionally been read either as idealized representations of knighthood or symbols of late medieval decadence, and suggests instead that they function as comments great political and religious enterprise known as the crusades. It details the two major crusade philosophies brought forward in fourteenth-century crusade propaganda: one which attempted to return the crusade to its eleventh and twelfth-century origins, and which found its best expression in the works of the theorist Philippe de Mézières; and the other a movement which began to associate the crusade with romance adventure done for the love of ladies, and the crusader frontier with the Arthurian otherworld. I propose that Chaucer’s Knight should be read in the context of the former approach to the crusade; indeed, not only does virtually every line in the Knight’s Portrait correspond to elements in de Mézières’ life or crusade thought, but the French propagandist’s influence also explains the changes Chaucer made in his most important source, Boccaccio’s Teseida.

when writing the Knight's Tale. Furthermore, I argue that the Squire's Portrait and Tale mirror the second, "romancing" approach to the crusade. This thesis traces the development of this approach through three case studies: a first on Nicolaus von Jeroschin's Kronike von Pruzinlant; a second on the Bâtard de Bouillon and Baudouin de Sebourg; and a third on La Prise d'Alixandre by Guillaume de Machaut. It then applies the findings of these case studies to the Squire's Portrait and Tale, and argues that they explain both the nature of the Squire's crusade as we find it in his Portrait, and the form, setting, and content of the Squire's Tale. This interpretation of the Knight and Squire sheds light on a great many lingering questions in the scholarship of the Canterbury Tales, and serves to indicate both the depth of Chaucer's social and political criticism and his active engagement in the polemic about the nature and the future of the crusade movement.

DISCOGRAPHY. The current Machaut discography is maintained on the marvelous website of Pierre-F. Roberge and Todd M. McComb, accessed through the International Machaut Society Homepage <<http://www.loyno.edu/~avclark/Machaut/imshome.htm>>. There are numerous new items listed there. Among many others, including several re-issues, the following seem worth special attention. There are some first recordings, including three ballades: De desconfort (B8), J'aim miex (B7), and Se je me pleing (B15); two virelais: Diex, Biauté (V19) and Loyauté vueil (V2); and a first performance of the polyphonic lai En demandant (L24/18), though instrumental. As far as I can tell, we still lack recordings of four ballades: Helas! tant (B2), N'en fait (B11), Ne pensez pas (B10), and Pour ce que tous (B12); three rondeaux: Merci vous pri (R3), Se vous n'estes (R7), and Vo dous regars (R8); two virelais: En mon cuer (V27/24) and Se ma dame (V6); and of course we lack recordings of several lais: Amis, t'amour (Lay des dames, L10/7), Amours doucement (L7/6), Contre ce dous (Lay de Nostre Dame, L15/10), Malgré Fortune (Lay de Plour, L19/14), Par trois raisons (L6/5), and Pour ce qu'on puist (L3).

Ars Harmonica AH 112. Machaut. Trio Subtilior. Rel. 2002. Contains instrumental recordings of Biauté qui (B4), Dame de qui (ballade, Remede insertion No. 5), Dame se vous (R13), Dame, je suis / Fins cuers / Fins cuers (M11), Dix et sept, cinq (R17), En amer (ballade, Remede insertion No. 4), En demandant (L24/18), Hocket, J'ay tant / Lasse! / Ego moriar (M7), Lasse! comment / Se j'aim / Pour quoy (M16), Ma fin (R14), Maugré mon cuer / De ma dolour / Quia amore (M14), Pas de tor (B30), Plourés, dames (B32), Qui es / Ha! Fortune / Et non est (M8), Tres bonne et belle (V26/23), as well as Li enseignement de Chaton / De touz les biens / Ecce (a motet erroneously attributed to Machaut).

Avie AV 2089. The Unknown Lover: Songs by Solage and Machaut. Gothic Voices. Rel. 2006. Includes Dame se vous m'estes (B37), Dieus, Biauté (V19), Douce dame, tant (R20), Mors sui (V29/26), Plus dure (V31/28), Quant je sui mis (V13), and Se je soupir (V36/30), along with the complete surviving works of Solage. This is the first "Gothic Voices" recording without Christopher Page.

Calliope CAL 9308. Guillaume de Machaut et l'art des trouvères. Vièles et voix du Moyen Age, dir. Emmanuel Bonnardot. Rel. 2001. Includes Un mortel lay (Lay mortel, L12/8) and an instrumental performance of Joie, plaisirance (chanson royale, Remede insertion No. 3).

Calliope CAL 9318. Guillaume de Machaut: Messe Nostre Dame, Motets et estampies. Obsidienne, dir. Emmanuel Bonnardot. Rel. 2002. Includes Douce dame (V4, instrumental), the Hocket (vocal!), and the Mass.

Cyprès 1630 (12 CDs). The Golden Age of European Polyphony. Laudantes Consort, dir. Guy Janssens. Rel. 2002. Includes the Mass.

Dorian DOR-93245. Pastourelles: The Art of Machaut and the Trouvères. Fortune's Wheel. Rec. 2001. Contains Ay mi! Dame de valour (V3), Comment qu'moy (V5), Dame, vostre doulz viaire (V17), De Fortune (B23), Douce dame jolie (V4), Je vivroie (V23/21), Moult sui (V37/31), Puis que ma dolour (V7), Quant je sui mis (V13), Sans cuer (R4), and Se mesdisans (V15).

ECM "New Series" 1823. Machaut: Motets. Hilliard Ensemble. Rel. 2004. Includes Amours qui a / Faus Samblant / Vidi Dominum (M15), Aucune gent / Qui plus aimme / Fiat voluntas (M5), Bone pastor / Bone pastor / Bone pastor (M18), Christe / Veni creator / Tribulatio (M21), Dame, je suis / Fins cuers / Fins cuers (M11), De Bon Espoir / Puis que la douce / Speravi (M4), Felix virgo / Inviolata / Ad te (M23), Fons tocius / O livoris / Fera pessima (M9), Hareu! / Helas! / Obediens (M10), He! Mors / Fine Amour / Quare non sum (M3), J'ay tant / Lasse! / Ego moriar (M7), Lasse! comment / Se j'aim / Pour quoy (M16), Martyrum / Diligenter / A Christo (M19), Qui es / Ha! Fortune / Et non est (M8), Tant doucement / Eins que / Ruina (M13), Tous corps / De soupirant / Suspiro (M2), Trop plus / Biauté / Je ne suis (M20), and Tu qui gregem / Plange / Apprehende arma (M22).

Eloquentia 0607. Guillaume de Machaut. L'amoureuse torment. Machaut et l'ancienne forge. Rel. 2006. Includes Aymi! (V3), and first complete recording of Loyauté que point (L1).

Eufoda 1360. Zodiac. Ars Nova and Ars Subtilior in the Low Countries and Europe. Capilla Flamenca, dir. Dirk Snellings. Rel. 2004. Includes Quant je suis mis (B13) and Riches d'amour (B5).

Harmonia mundi HMU 90 7398. The Rose, the Lily and the Whortleberry: Medieval Gardens; Jardins médiévaux. Orlando Consort. Rel. 2005. Includes Rose, liz (R10).

Jade (Universal) 198 796, Sur la terre comme au ciel: Un jardin au Moyen-Age. Discantus, dir. Brigitte Lesne. Alla Francesca, dir. Pierre Hamon. Rel. 2002. Contains De toutes flours (B31, Faenza intabulation?), Doulz viaire (R1), J'aim sans penser laidure (V14), and J'aime mieux languir (B7).

Liber unUsualis 1001. Machaut: Unrequited. Liber unUsualis. Rel. 2003. Includes Dame, de qui (ballade, Remede insertion No. 5), Dame, ne regardez pas (B9), Donnez, signeurs (B26), Felix virgo / Inviolata gentrix / Ad te suspiramis (M23), J'aim miex languir (B7), Je ne cuit pas (B14), Martyrum gemma / Diligenter / A Christo (M19), Quant en moy / Amour / Amara valde (M1), Qui es promesses / Ha! Fortune / Et non est (M8), Trop plus / Biauté / Je ne sui (M20), and the déploration by F. Andrieu, Armes, amours / O flour des flours (double ballade).

Lomenec'h, Gérard, and Agnès Brosset. Lais Bretons: Aux origines de la poésie chantée médiévale. Paris: Layeur, 2000. Ensemble Colortales, dir Agnès Brosset. Book plus CD, includes recordings of S'onques doleureusement (Lai de confort, L17/12), and Pour ce que plus (Lai de consolation, L23/17).

MSR Classics MS 1095. Masters, Monsters & Mazes: Treading the Medieval Labyrinth. Trefoil. Rel. 2005. Contains instrumental recording of Phyton le merveilleus serpent (B38), and, more importantly, voices-and-instruments recording of the parody by Franciscus, Phiton, beste tres venimeuse, as well as other important works of Solage, Grimace, Cuvelier, Senleches, Suzoy, Trebor, and others.

Olive Music OM 002. Trecento. Rel. 2003. Includes voice-and-instruments recordings of Dame ne regardez pas (B9), Dame, mon cuer (V32/29), De desconfort (B8), and Se je me pleing (B15). Recordings of these last two ballades are otherwise hard to come by.

Opus 111 OP 30-309. Almisonis Melos: Latin Motets and Mass Fragments in the Ivrea Codex. Cantica Symphonia, dir. Giuseppe Maletto. Rec. 2000. Includes Martyrum gemma / Diligenter / A Christo (M19).

Opus 111 OP 30303 Le roman de la rose. Alla francesca. Rel. 2001. Includes De toutes flours (B31), Je puis trop bien (B28), Je vivroye liement (V23/21), and Qui plus aimme / Aucune gent / Fiat (M5).

Raum Klang 9905. Triplacité: 1350-1450. Zorgina Vocalensemble. Rel. 2000. Includes Puis qu'en oubli (R18), Une vipere en cuer (B27).

Symphonia 97 155. Codex Reina: Ballades, Virelais et Rondeaux, 14ème siècle. Continens Paradisi, dir. Eric Mentzel. Rec. 1997. Along with several items of the Ars subtilior, this program includes De fortune (B23), De toutes flours (B31), and Gais et jolis (B35), as well as Dame qui fust (an anonymous work playing off of B23) and Anthonello da Caserta's Beauté parfaite, setting a ballade of the Loange des dames that Machaut himself did not set to music.

Virginia Arts Recordings VA-06436. Guillaume de Machaut: Messe de Nostre Dame. Zephyrus Medieval Quintet, dir. Paul Walker. Rel. 2006.

Zig-Zag Territoires ZZT 021002.2 (2 CDs). Guillaume de Machaut: les motets. Ensemble Musica Nova. Rel. 2002. This purportedly is a complete recording of the motets, but several tracks are devoted to individual voices, sometimes even instrumentally performed. Eventually we get all of the motets in complete vocal form except Maugré / De ma dolour / Quia amore langueo (M14), Puisque la douce / De Bon Espoir / Speravi (M4), and Tant doucement / Eins que / Ruina (M13).

ART OVERVIEW AND BIBLIOGRAPHY (Domenic Leo <dleo3@comcast.net>)

Until the publication of Lawrence Earp's Guide (Earp 1995), which includes important information for art historians, François Avril's groundbreaking series of articles represented the sole possibility for an interdisciplinary study of the Machaut images (Avril 1969a–1982g). This has changed dramatically over the past five years. There are two dissertations on the images (Drobinsky 2004, and Leo 2005) and forays into the music-text-image nexus in an upcoming dissertation (Maxwell). The following bibliography, taken in large part from my dissertation, documents the “tools” necessary for art historical studies of the Machaut images and includes some little-known books relating to Machaut’s possible patrons (Jean de Luxembourg [Benešovská 1996], and his daughter, Bonne de Luxembourg, duchess of Normandy [Lermack 1999, and Land 1994]). These include entries on iconography which are directly or indirectly related to the miniatures or 14th-century manuscripts in general. The following represent a brief group of the different topics and methodologies used: reception and performance theory (Coleman 2000); “single-author” manuscripts preceding the Machaut images (King Alfonso the Wise, see Snow 1979; Gautier de Coinci, see Rusakoff 2006). There are also studies or manuscripts concerning the same subject matter—single-author manuscripts—but chronologically following the Machaut images: Christine de Pizan (Hindman 1986), and Villon (Regalado 1993).

NB: Due to the interdisciplinary nature of Machaut research there will be overlaps with Earp's Guide.

- _____, b. "Authorial Presence in the Illuminated Machaut Manuscripts." Diss. New York University, Graduate School of Arts and Science, 2005. Ann Arbor: UMI, AAT 3170849. Abstract: Shows authorial presence by using the miniatures in illuminated Machaut manuscripts. Re-assessing filiations between the sixteen extant illuminated manuscripts from an art historian's viewpoint reveals a group of five related manuscripts created during, and shortly after Machaut's lifetime. This group constitutes a central source where Machaut's input could overlap with artistic production. Through his illuminated manuscripts, he casts himself as poet, composer and, seemingly, painter. The 'author portrait' miniatures in Machaut's final work, the Prologue, sum up his lifetime achievements.

This thesis explores the visual impact of the music in the six principal "complete-works" Machaut manuscripts using a methodology which considers each manuscript as a "performance" in its own right, a performance in which three principal categories of “performers” take part: the author-performer, the scribal-performers, and the reader-performers. This analysis offers conclusions as to the role of artists in the society of mid- and late-fourteenth-century France, the changing perceptions of words and music, and the role of reading, writing, and memory in composition and manuscript production.

- O’Meara, Carra Ferguson. Monarchy and Consent: The Coronation Book of Charles V, British Library MS Cotton Tiberius B. VIII. London: Harvey Miller, 2001. 207, plate 72 (C: fol. 59). In her extensive study of the Coronation Book and its painter, Ferguson, 148–50, speculates that Machaut participated in compiling the Ordo of Charles V; and in her detailed examination of the miniatures, wonders if the figure of a canon holding a book, plate 44, represents Machaut. François Avril’s studies aside, this is the most in-depth work on a single painter from the Machaut manuscripts to date. It merits attention for a reconstruction of the artist’s career and the socio-political backdrop against which he worked. Ferguson’s work is slightly biased in favor of the Coronation Master’s genius, though, and this artist can neither be credited as the first nor the sole French painter to use “portraiture” or perspectival innovations at this time.
- Opacic, Zoë. “Charles IV and the Emmaus Monastery: Slavonic Tradition and Imperial Ideology in Fourteenth-century Prague.” Diss. University of London, Courtauld Institute of Art, 2002. Abstract (edited): This dissertation examines the unusual instance of the revival of Slavonic liturgy in fourteenth-century Bohemia. The foundation of the Emmaus monastery—then known as Slavonic—in Prague, in 1348, marked a symbolic return of the extinct vernacular liturgy to Bohemia, under the auspices of its new ruler Charles IV of Luxembourg (1347–1378), and by a special papal licence. One aim of this thesis is to reconstruct and date the sequence of the monastery’s construction and to recreate the original appearance of its heavily-damaged hall church. The stylistic analysis of the architecture is followed by the assessment of the Emmaus monastery’s superb biblical cycle of wall paintings against the complex background of contemporary art, finding important parallels not only in Bohemia but also in Italy, France, Germany and Flanders. Throughout the dissertation the aim is to place the Emmaus monastery and its art in the broader ideological contexts of Charles IV’s reign and the spiritual values embodied in the New Town.

Ann Arbor: UMI, AAT 3205677. Abstract: The deluxe 14th-century Miracles of the Virgin manuscript, Paris, BnF, n. acq. fr. 24541, containing poetry, songs, and prayers by the Benedictine monk Gautier de Coinci (c. 1177–1236), is justifiably the most famous copy of this text. It also analyzes the relationship between the whole sequence of images and the text in comparison to the other illustrated Gautier de Coinci manuscripts, which are rarely discussed or reproduced in art-historical literature. The methodology combines stylistic, iconographic, and codicological examinations with image-text analysis and audience reception. This section argues that it was more likely to have been produced for the entire royal family or court for multiple purposes and occasions.

The International Machaut Society is a not-for-profit scholarly organization devoted to the study, criticism, performance, research, and exchange of ideas related to all aspects of the works of the poet and composer Guillaume de Machaut (ca. 1300-1377) and their manuscript and performance traditions. Fields of inquiry fostered by the Society include, but are not limited to, literary history and criticism; music history, criticism, and theory; the performing arts; art history; and codicology. Study and performance of works of other poets and composers or of other performance and manuscript traditions are also included within activities sponsored by the Society insofar as they contribute significantly to study of the background, context, or influence of the works of Machaut. The Society encourages membership with the broadest possible international representation and currently boasts members from almost every continent. Any person may become a member of the International Machaut Society upon payment of dues.
